1. To answer this query directly, I would have to say that we do NOT offer lectures or seminars in any of our operations training courses on the following specific subjects:

- a. Senate Resolution 400.
- b. The principal findings of the Church Committee.

Although some members of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and their staff aides have [REDACTED] we do not have a program where we routinely invite them to observe or address our operations courses.

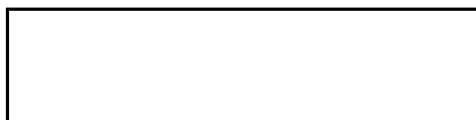

2. We touch on the role of the Church Committee, the Rockefeller Committee, and the House Select Committee when we discuss, in detail, Executive Order 11905. These same organizations are mentioned when we talk about [REDACTED] in the various courses.

3. What should we do that we are not doing? I think we cover rather completely Executive Order 11905, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] (the regulations on what organizations and types of people we are not permitted to recruit or use for intelligence purposes). Senate Resolution 400 is best presented in a general orientation course, not in the operations courses, because I see little direct relevance of this Resolution to operations training. We can, if you believe appropriate, reproduce Senate Resolution 400 and give to all operations training students for reading at their leisure. I can see some--not much, but some--value in having a senior staff aide from the Senate Select Committee come down for an evening to do the following:

- a. Describe the Committee's organization and function. Highlight his talk with some specifics, not generalities. For example, on budget matters, what kind of issues or budget submissions cause problems for the Congress.
- b. Agree to a question-and-answer period during which students can ask specific questions and, hopefully, obtain specific answers.
- c. Articulate the Committee's concern about certain types of intelligence activities.
